-Antenna System FM Dipole NFVX1001-1 / 2 Bays

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The IRTE broad band antenna system type NFVX1001-1 /2BAYS has a slim and lightweight layout, this as resulted in low wind load, low weight and facilities during installation process.

This system is an array of two vertical polarized dipole suitably designed to be installed on side of the tower by using a pole.

Each dipole is provided with a special pipe clamp (50 ÷ 114mm diameter) and is individually fed through a 7-16 DIN female input, moreover it is protected against ice and snow by means of suitable feed point radome and the max power handling capability is 3 kW at 108MHz.

The antenna splitting system is made with coaxial cables and power divider arrangement, whose type and dimensions are chosen in accordance to the desired power handling capability, gain and pattern. The input of the power distribution network is 1 x 7-16 DIN Female.

Each dipole is individually fed through one 1/2" foam dielectric cable (7-16 DIN Male) that can handle 3 kW at 108MHz .

The two ways power divider feeds the antenna and it is located at the center of the antenna array.

The entire antenna system is adequately protected against heavy rain fall and humid climate of tropical region.

Each component / sub system of the antenna system is adequately protected for extreme weather conditions of extreme day and night temperature variations. All antenna system components are watertight and tested separately in the factory. The electrical phases of each cable has also been checked.

Antenna system will be supplied complete with dipoles, power dividers, branch cables, mounting brackets for dipoles, supporting clamps for power dividers and tie locks for branch cables., supporting pole and drawings.

-Antenna System FM Dipole NFVX1001-1 / 2 Bays

ANTENNA SYSTEM UNPACKING AND ASSEMBLING OPERATIONS:

All materials should be thoroughly inspected upon their arrival for external damage. This will insure that any missing or damaged material can be replaced before installation. Crate's content must be checked with the packing list.

Coaxial components not yet installed in the antenna system should be kept indoor protected from dust and/or moisture. All the coaxial cables (not yet installed) and power splitters are shipped with plastic or metallic caps in place. Do not remove these protections until each component is to be installed.

The supplied antenna is assembled on company and its parameter are checked. Once the tests are finished the antenna is shipped disassembled for the transportation and installation facilities. Installation procedure of the antenna can be carried out in several methods according to installer's equipment and tools. Before the antenna lifting is necessary to install the mechanical interface in the right position for proper H.R.P. orientation. For the installation a clear dry day is suggested.

1) Fasten the brackets on the dipole in the correct position; 2) fasten the FM dipoles on their mountings. NOTE : The dipoles must be installed oriented to the direction of the area to be covered (all in same direction); 3) install the power splitter by means of supplied brackets.

4) Connect the antenna dipoles to the power splitter outputs by means of supplied branch cables. Major attention is required during the antenna hoisting in order to avoid damage to the dipoles and other components; 5) Check the perfect vertical alignment of the antennas.

During all stages of antenna installation please pay attention to the following matters :

Until actual installation is required, keep all moisture seals in place. Always keep the contact surfaces clean (inner lines and flanges). Clean if required, with alcohol or detergent, any greasy or dirty surface.

Do not forget to insert the gasket rings (O-Rings); such rings must be properly lubricated with silicone grease. Make sure that flange marks are coincident.

Check that inner lines match with their seats (if required a cone may be used to splay the inner connector). Fasten alternatively all nuts (with proper tightening torque as per drawings) for a uniform contact pressure on flange periphery.

During the installation of coaxial cables, pay attention to the minimum bending radius must be as per shown on "Technical data of coaxial cables" included in this handbook. Not to bend cables with outside temperatures below -5°C and above +60°C. Not to roll cables up (keep them as much straight as possible all along their length).

Use insulating supports, keeping them at a distance of out least 70mm one to each other.

Once the antenna has been installed, before applying full power verify that installation has been carried out properly as per the enclosed drawings; check out if flanges and ring nuts are properly fastened; test the electrical characteristics (VSWR for example) meet the listed performance.

WARNINGS:

The antenna when energised can present potentially high voltage and a high intensity R.F. field in its vicinity. Do not touch any parts of the antenna system when energised. All maintenance or repairs must be done with the primary voltage to the transmitter disconnected and all transmitter remote controls disabled.

Final Checks: Each dipole is tested for minimum V.S.W.R. over the operating frequency range and no further adjustments are required during installation. All power splitters, are designed for minimum V.S.W.R. across the total bandwidth of the antenna, generally no field adjustments are necessary.

Maintenance suggestion: For a long and trouble free operational life of the antenna system supplied, periodical checks on all the relevant parts of the system are to be carried out. Specific checks that we would suggest to perform are:

Make sure that no hot spots or burn signs are there on coaxial components; that no deformed and/or cracked coaxial components and steelwork are there; that all bolts & nuts, screws etc. etc. of all the coaxial components, steel plates & junctions, are correctly tightened; that no signs of corrosion are there either on coax. components or on any parts of the steel structures.

If any of the above defects are found during the checks, proceed immediately to rectify the defect found. In the event of serious flaws, please contact our Technical Department. Intervals after which these checks as well as ordinary maintenance are to be performed should not exceed two years.

Besides of the above checks, we suggest you also verify periodically that antenna system electrical performances are in line with the agreed specifications.
